Asking a Reduction on the "Jeff" Bridge-Other Appeals Yesterday.

S. O. Pickens, solicitor for the Pennsylvania system, appeared before the Board of Tax Commissioners yesterday mcrning to argue for a reduction in the assessment of the Louisville bridge. He informed the board that while the bridge is a mile long only one-eighth of it is in Indiana. The entire bridge did not cost $3,000,000, but the board values it at $1,600,000. Mr. Pickens thought $120,000 instead of $240,000 would be a fair appraisance. The be a fair appraisement. The stock of the bridge company sells at 145. While having the ear of the board Mr. Pickens again urged that the assessment of the Indianapolis & Vincennes road is too high. He asked that it be reduced. The afternoon session was pened with the appeal case of the Farmpre' Bank, of Frankfort, again before the beard. J. C. Suit, atterney for the Clinton County Board of Review, appeared to defend the assessment of $120,000, which D.
A. Coulter, the cashier, had contended is 30 per cent. higher than other property of the county is assessed. Captain Coulter was given an opportunity to reply to the objections entered by Judge Suit. He said a Frankfort newspaper plant, for which blestions entered by Judge Suit. He said a Frankfort newspaper plant, for which $10,000 had been refused, was assessed at $1,525. It was therefore unjust, he contended, to assess the bank at $120,000, on the ground that its stock is worth 125. William Fisher, of Bloomington, appealed, through his attorney, C. G. Renner, for relief from an assessment of $10,305 cash. He said he did not have so much money, but, on April 1, had $2,875 in treasury notes, which are not subject to taxation. His case was taken under advisement, and the board adjourned.

Mutual Benefit Society's Report-Candidates for Officers to Be Voted Upon This Merning.

The National Association of Letter-carriers met again at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. Mr. Harmer, of Kansas City, introduced a petition of seventy-three carriers of St. Louis, who desired to be admitted as a branch and to have a vote in the convention. The Chair announced that they would be admitted, but that they could not have a vote in the meeting. The delegation from New York city presented a circular setting forth that before the organization of the National Lettercarriers' Association the carriers of that city were organized as an association of the Knights of Labor. The old members insist on working subject to their original by-laws, while the newer members ignore those by-laws. Two sets of officers were recently elected, and two sets of delegates

There was collected during the year $4,-929.07 and expended $4,350.93. A balance of $1,403.89 remains in the treasury, $756.47 being in the general fund and $647.42 in the legislative fund. Secretary Victory then read his report, showing in detail the expenses and work of the year a nd the various articles of property in possession of the association. His totals agreed with the report of the executive board. Both reports were adopted. Mr. Harman, of Kansas City, presented a partial report from the committee on resolutions. One of these, presented by the Fort Wayne branch, favoring the extension of the civil service, was adopted.

A resolution of Mr. Walsh, of Chicago, requiring the committee on legislation to report progress once a month to the executive board was adopted.

Invitations were received from Kansas City, Chicago and other cities for the carriers' convention of 1893.

The committee on new business reported a resolution recommending an appropriation of $100, to be expended on Decoration day in flowers for the grave of S. S. Cox in recognition of his services in the interests of letter-carriers. It was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Watson, of Lowell, Mass., the Chair was authorized to appoint a committee of five, whose duty it should Executive Committee of the State Boards of Health Will Meet in This City.

Quarantine Arrangements of the Ports on Both Coasts to Be Inspected-How Cholera Originates-Fome Great Plagues.

Dr. J. N. McCormack, of Bowling Green.

Ky., president of the International Conference of State Boards of Health, has called a meeting of the executive committee of the conference for Friday next, in this city. The object of the meeting is to consider the matter of appointing a committee to inspect all the quarantine stations on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, with a view to ascertaining their efficiency in preventing the introduction of cholera into this country from Europe. In fact, it has already been decided to appoint the committee, and they will proceed at once to make a thorough investigation. While it is not regarded as certain that the dreaded scourge is likely to reach this country, the situation is such that Dr. McCormack and his associates of the conference deem it necessary to see that the quarantine is made as effective as it is possible to have it. In his action he is indorsed by all the State boards of health who have been con-

As will be seen by the telegraphic dispatches in this morning's Journal, this action is being taken none too quickly. There is now no doubt whatever that the plague is prevalnt at Hamburg, and the communication between that port and this conti-

The rapid march westward being made by the dreaded Asiatic cholera, in spite of every governmental or individual precaution taken at the ports where foreign vessels land, naturally excites local interest in the disease, and perhaps some knowledge of its history is at this time readable. Inasmuch as the disease has reached the most important ports of Europe with which this country has daily intercourse, the probability of it reaching the United States becomes each day more alarming. The fact that the disease does not confine its ravages to any particular clime, but rather goes to work in its deathly mission wherever it is brought, arouses public concern despite the assurances of any department whose duty it is to arrest

Its immigration.

True Asiatic cholera is a virulent form of septic cholera, and in ages past seems to have generally originated in Hindostan and like the contagious forms of influenza, dysentery or erysipelas, has become portable and capable of reproducing itself in every body in which it gets lodgment. Four hundred years before Christ Hippocrates made such comments on the disease as leaves the assurance that the disturbance as leaves the assurance that the disturbance was at that early period transferred to Greece from Asia. Doctors as early as A. D. 50 described the symptoms of the disorder. Beyond this the age of the disease is a matter of conjecture. When the French and English struggled for the Coromandel coast of India repeated epidemics were noticed near Madras and Pondicherry, in connection with the great Hindoo pilgrimage, while Alexander, of Tralles, A. D. 525 speaks of its certain symptoms, such as the suppression of the pulse, followed by secondary typhoid fever or death in a few hours.

typhoid fever or death in a few hours.

The year 1756 marks the recognition of periodically returning twelve yearly epidemics, connected with the great twelve yearly Hindoo festivals at the great temples. On March 22, 1781, five thousand English troops, marching near Ganjam, not far from the great temple of Juggernaut, and very shortly after the twelve yearly festival had taken place, were attacked by the disease very suddenly after camping on foul pilgrim grounds and drinking polluted water. Men previously healthy dropped down by the dozens, while those less severely affected were generally past recovery in twenty-four hours.

Three times twelve or thirty-six years subsequently the great historical epidemic of 1817 occurred. This proceeded up the Ganges as far as Allahabad, when it was deflected southward to the province of Bundeleund, in which the Marquis of Hastings was carrying on war against the Mahrattas with ninety thousand men, Hastings was carrying on war against the Mahrattas with ninety thousand men. Ten thousand of the natives had already died with the disease, and in a short time nine thousand men of the English army had succumbed to the pestilence. The disease reached Bombay, and was carried up to Bassorah, at the head of the Persian gulf; where eighteen thousand persons died in eighteen days. From there it went around the Meditteranean coast, whence it faded away in 1821. Every successive epidemic of cholera has been carried up the Persian gulf from Bombay, Surat, Kurtachee and other ports on the western coast of India, and thus reached the Mediteranean, Black and Caspian seas and the neighboring countries by the so-called Persian gulf route.

In 1826 the first indication of another pestilence appeared in the north of India. Epidemic cholera broke out in Hurdwar, the great place of pilgrimage at the source of the Ganges, where it first issues from the foot of the Himalaya mountains. A few hundred thousand pilgrims go to Hurdwar every year; more every third year; still more every sixth and minth year, and finally three million assemble every twelfth year. From Hurdwar cholers was carried back by the huge caravans which came down to the festival from central Asia, Persia and Afghanistan to Cabool. Then the disease advanced over the great northwest central Asiatic caravan route to Russia.
Also from Cabool by the north Persian route due west to the Caspian sea, and from there to Astrakhan, in Russia, both by sea and land. Cholera reached Orenburg Aug. 26, 1829, and Astrakhan in September. From Orenburg it proceeded due west to Nijni-Novgorod and Moscow, and time the Polish revolution was going on, and Russian troops carried the disease to Warsaw, whence it was conveyed west to Berlin and from there to Hamburg, the point in Germany it has now reached, and from there to London.

After the pestilence had prevailed in England, and Ireland, and Scotland it was carried by en or twelve Irish emigrant ships to Quelec in the spring of 1832, and from there up the St. Lawrence river, across the lakes to Detroit, where it met the United States troops going to the Black Hawk war. In a short time the whole army sent by way of the lakes was rendered incapable of taking the field. The greater part reached Chicago in a most deplorable condition. One company which had been mustered and inspected fourteen days before, without a man on the sick list, had dropped forty-seven men out of seventy-eight in that short time, and one regiment lost two bundred men in one week. It was distribnted to all the national posts and forts in the extreme West, especially to Forts Dear-born and Crawford, and Fort Armstrong, on Rock island. From there the pestilence was carried down the Mississippi to New Orleans by October, 1832. Six thousand died out of a population of fifty-five thou-The next twelve-yearly epidemic commenced in lower Bengal, 1841, supplemented by a Hurdwar epidemic in 1848, and was found in Afghanistau in 1844, in Persia and Meshed in 1845, advancing west in 1846 to Teheran, reaching southern Russia in 1847. In 1866 the United States was visited with the disease again. It spread all over the country with fearful results, as many will distinctly remember. One of the greatest sources of contagion is drinking water from cholera pollutions of wells, springs and tountains. The disease never spreads so fast in cities where the water is kept pure in close pipes. Pure drinking water soon becomes contaminated when left standing in cholers wards. The ingestion of this water is vastly more fatal than the use of bad fruits or poor liquors; but its danger may generally be prevented by simple boiling or filtering through charcoal or by adding a few grains of permanganate of potash. One of the best antidotes of the disease is cleanliness. If a city be clean there is very little danger of its being severely ravished by the disease, especially if the homes are all kept well fumigated.

The attention of the Board of Health is respectfully referred to the number of dead cats and rats usually lying around on the asphait pavements. These dead animals are not exactly as sweet to the olfactory nerve as burning incense. It would at this time.

be very pertinent to have gutters, sewers and cellars cleaned and the city generally cleared of its bad smells.
